ABSTRACT

A guide to more than 850 study-abroad programs is updated each year to give information about programs that take place during the period from late spring to early fall. About half of the programs, which range from 3 days to 3 months, are sponsored by U.S. colleges and universities, the rest by foreign institutions and private and governmental groups. A brief introductory section to help students plan vacation study abroad includes information on types of programs, finances, travel and living, language proficiency, the Third World, and disabled students. All programs are listed alphabetically by region, country, and city, and entries include the name and address of the sponsoring body and brief information on: dates, subjects, level, credit, eligibility, instruction, the year the program was established, program-related travel, costs, housing, application deadlines, and the primary contact for further information. Appendices include a list of consortia that sponsor programs, an annotated bibliography, and indexes of sponsoring institutions and fields of study. (SW)

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

Vacation Study Abroad is designed to help you plan enjoyable summer study abroad. It provides the most relevant information on more than 850 study-abroad programs that take place during the period from late spring to early fall.

The information in the program entries is based on a survey that took place in July 1985. Questionnaires were sent to all sponsors of programs in the previous edition of the book (1984), to those organizations which informed IIE of new programs since the preceding edition was published, and to all U.S. colleges and universities listed in Accredited Institutions of Postsecondary Education 1984-85, published by the American Council on Education for the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation.

Approximately half of the programs listed in Vacation Study Abroad are sponsored or cosponsored by U.S. colleges and universities. The remainder are offered by a variety of organizations, including private agencies, foreign language schools, and foreign universities. IIE invites program sponsors to send information on programs which do not appear in this book, so that they may be surveyed for the next edition.

IIE has published its series of study-abroad guides for over 30 years. U.S. colleges and universities—some 550 of which are IIE Educational Associate member institutions—have traditionally been highly responsive to the Institute's surveys for these books, as have private agencies and foreign universities. Given this invaluable cooperation, Vacation Study Abroad is as comprehensive as IIE can make it.

IIE tries to make the information contained in this book as accurate and useful as possible. Bear in mind, however, that information-gathering in publishing takes place long before a book appears and, in this case, before program arrangements can be finalized. For this reason, it's a good idea to use this book as a general resource for locating programs of interest. Final and full information on any program, particularly dates and costs, must be obtained directly from the program sponsor—not from IIE.

Students interested in study during the academic year should consult the companion volume to this book, Academic Year Abroad, which lists over 1100 foreign study programs of varying length, held during the months of September to June, and sponsored by accredited U.S. colleges and universities.

To derive maximum benefit from Vacation Study Abroad, be sure to read this section, which explains how the entries are organized and the terms used. The special chapter entitled "PLANNING FOR STUDY ABROAD" should also be reviewed thoroughly. It describes the various types of study programs available, how to select the one most appropriate to your needs, how to arrange academic credit for your studies abroad, and a variety of other pertinent topics.

The format for the program entries has been completely revised in the 1986 editions in order to make the books as easy to use as possible. Additional information has been added on program costs, and telephone numbers have been added to the contact information. Indexes have also been substantially strengthened in order to facilitate locating programs within your field of interest.

If you have any suggestions for improving our books, please send them to: The Editor, IIE Publications, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017. Information on programs not listed in this edition is also welcome; please enclose a flyer, brochure, poster, or course catalog when you write to us about a new program.

The information contained in this book—complemented by the guidance of an experienced study-abroad adviser if you are currently enrolled at a college—can help you plan and prepare for what may be one of the most delightful and rewarding experiences of your life.

Overall Organization of the Program Listings

All programs are listed alphabetically by the region, country and city in which they are located. Programs which operate in more than one region of the world are listed in the "WORLDWIDE" chapter at the beginning of the book. Programs which take place in more than one country within a region are listed in the "More Than One Country" section at the beginning of the appropriate chapter, e.g., "EUROPE, More Than One Country". Programs in which resident study takes place in more than one city within a country are listed in the "More Than One City" section at the beginning of the listings for that country, e.g., "ENGLAND, More Than One City." Remember to consult these general worldwide, regional, and country listings in addition to listings for specific cities.

Program Sponsor and Name

Each entry begins with a number used to identify the program within the listing sequence and in the indexes at the back of the book. The name of the sponsoring institution(s) is next, followed by the program title.

Many study-abroad programs are sponsored cooperatively by groups of colleges and organizations, or consortia. If five or fewer schools cosponsor a program, all are listed in the program description. Consortia with more than five members are listed in Appendix A.

Location

This line identifies the countries or cities in which resident study takes place. Some programs include travel to other places, and others offer orientation in cities other than those in which resident study is held. These facts are noted in the entries, but the programs are listed under the country and city where the major portion of resident study takes place.

Generally, where the program location is specified by the placement of the program entry or is stated in the program title, no additional location line is given.

Dates

Exact dates are stated if they have been provided by the program sponsor. Enrollment is for the full period indicated; if you may enroll for less than the full period, this will generally be stated.

Remember that final program dates were often not available at the time our survey was conducted. It is important, therefore, to call or write the sponsor for exact information.

Subjects

Courses of study available through the program are listed here, along with information on concentrations and specialization, and the availability of independent study and internships. Consult INDEX II: Fields of Study, for assistance in locating programs in your specific field.

Level, Credit, Eligibility

If a program is limited to students of the sponsoring institution or consortium, this restriction or preference will be indicated here in bold italics. The academic level is listed next: freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, graduates, professionals or adult students. The term "undergraduates" is used to mean all undergraduates. "Precollege" will generally mean high school graduates who have not yet entered college. In some cases, sponsors list a minimum age requirement here rather than an academic level.

Entries indicate the academic level for which the program is intended, but if a program is of special interest, it may be worthwhile to contact the program sponsor directly to determine whether exceptions can be made.

The number of credits offered for the complete program will generally be listed next. It may be expressed in quarter hours, semester hours or trimester hours, depending upon the practice of the program sponsor. If the number of credits listed is for less than the full program, this will usually be specified.

Programs open to both undergraduates and graduates will list undergraduate credits first, then graduate credits, which are specifically designated "graduate credits."

Be sure to consult your academic or study-abroad adviser about receiving academic credit before you enroll in a program, particularly if it is sponsored by a school other than your own. Remember that transfer credit is never automatic; it must be arranged in advance.

On the graduate level, you must be particularly careful to clarify the awarding of academic credit in advance. Some programs accept graduate students but do not award graduate credit. Often graduate students take undergraduate study-abroad courses to meet a language requirement, to do research, or for course enrichment without the expectation of graduate credit.

Other eligibility requirements and course prerequisites are usually listed last in this section and frequently require clarification by the program sponsor. In many cases, space considerations do not permit us to list these requirements fully and it is usually necessary to get full details directly from the program contact.

Instruction

The first item provided here is the language in which courses are taught (except for programs in the United Kingdom, where English is assumed to be the language of instruction). Where more than one language is listed, consult the program sponsor for exact information. Many foreign language courses are taught in that language, while other courses may be taught in English. For courses taught exclusively in a foreign language, be sure to determine in advance whether your level of fluency in that language is sufficient to understand the course content.

Entries then indicate the type of courses students attend: courses specifically arranged for the program group (which may be taught by U.S. or foreign faculty), special courses for foreigners at a foreign institution, or regular courses from the general curriculum of a foreign institution. The term "foreign faculty" will generally refer to instructors native to the country in which the program takes place. For a full discussion of the types of courses and programs listed in the Learning Traveler, see the chapter on "PLANNING FOR STUDY ABROAD."

The end of this section briefly lists teaching methods used in the programs. Again, for more information, consult the sponsor directly, as space does not permit a full discussion of this topic in the book.

Highlights

This section includes information on the year the program was established, orientation, program-related travel, and the availability of program evaluations to prospective participants. The "program evaluations" referred to may be in any form, from a list of former participants who have agreed to be contacted for their firsthand experiences in the program, to a full academic review by a faculty review committee; they are a valuable resource to use in evaluating the programs available.

Costs

In this section, we have asked sponsors to provide a fairly complete picture of the main expenses involved in their programs. Where possible, they have given a "package amount" for the full program, or for a relevant portion of the program. This amount is followed by a coded list of the items it includes. The codes used are: T (tuition), B (texts and reading materials), M (meals) or some M (anything less than three meals per day), RT (round-trip transportation between the U.S. and the program site), H (housing), E (excursions), F (fees connected with participation in the program), FT (field trips), and HI (health/accident insurance).

If any type of financial aid (other than loans) is available to participants in the program, the phrase "scholarships available" is used. We have indicated the availability of "work-study" in a similar fashion.

Housing

Most programs provide housing for members of the group. Entries indicate the type of housing available. Programs which do not provide living facilities will usually provide a listing of available housing in the area.

Deadline

In most cases, deadlines are for the receipt of completed applications with all necessary supporting material: transcripts, recommendations, deposits, etc. Find out well in advance what application material is needed.

Occasionally programs will admit students after the deadline is past, but usually only when a program has not filled all allotted places. It is best not to count on luck, however. Apply early!

Contact

The primary contact for further information and applications for a program is the individual, department, or organization listed first. Entries now provide full addresses and telephone numbers to help you obtain further information. In each address listing, a semicolon indicates the end of the mailing address; U.S. addresses will then usually be followed by an area code in parentheses, a telephone number, and an extension number. A toll-free 800 number, if any, is listed first, followed by a slash and the organization's regular phone number.

Programs sponsored by consortia will often list the administering school as the primary contact, followed by a reference to "see Appendix A" for contact information at member schools. The usual rule in this situation is that students at member schools apply to their campus study-abroad adviser, while students at nonmember schools should contact the main consortium office or the administering school.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The Institute of International Education does not attempt to review or evaluate programs listed in this book. Inclusion of a program does not imply IIE recommendation, nor does omission imply IIE disapproval. Program evaluations and additional information must be requested directly from the program sponsor, NOT from IIE.

PLANNING FOR STUDY ABROAD

Study abroad can be an extraordinary adventure in which the educational experiences do not start or stop at the classroom door, or even at the edge of the campus. In contrast to the relatively sheltered life found on many U.S. college campuses, study in a foreign setting exposes the student to a whole gamut of new cultural experiences. Such experiences open up fresh perspectives on international political and economic issues, interpersonal relationships, and ultimate career choices.

Even an adventure, however, benefits from prior planning. How well you achieve your immediate personal and academic objectives, as well as your long-range career goals, depends heavily on choosing the right country, institution, and program. Because of the complex choices to be made, planning should begin a full year prior to the date you expect to depart.

RESEARCHING THE OPTIONS

The range of study-abroad programs available to U.S. students is considerable. Many programs focus on specific academic disciplines, while others feature both academic and language study. A number of programs combine independent study or internships with traditional course work. Your choice of program should be determined by a realistic assessment of your academic preparation and objectives. If you are currently enrolled at a U.S. college or university, be sure to consult with either a study-abroad or Fulbright Program adviser, or a faculty member knowledgeable about foreign study programs. The adviser can help determine whether the programs you are considering will mesh with your overall educational goals—and whether you will receive academic credit for them.

Faculty advisers can play a key role in the selection of a foreign study program. However, it remains your responsibility to research the alternatives thoroughly: read the program literature, contact the designated faculty member or department office to ask specific questions you may have, request and review any program evaluations available, and try to get in touch with students who have previously participated in programs that interest you. It is also helpful to meet with students from other countries to learn what it is like to be a "foreign student."

Allow plenty of time for this research—and expect to discover exciting educational possibilites you hadn't originally been aware of. Please note that IIE does not review the hundreds of programs listed in this book and should not be contacted for program evaluations.

Language Proficiency

Language proficiency is perhaps the single most important factor in choosing where to study. It is essential to be completely realistic about your level of language competency. Holding a simple conversation or ordering a meal in a foreign language is one thing; following a complicated lecture and reading scholarly books is something else entirely.

U.S. college-sponsored programs may be conducted in cooperation with a foreign institution or may be taught by foreign faculty. In such cases, the language of instruction is typically the language of the host country. The minimum requirement for most U.S. college-sponsored programs is two years of college-level foreign language study or the equivalent.

Study abroad offers an incomparable opportunity to learn the language and culture of your host country. In addition to other courses of study, you may want to review the variety of language and culture/civilization programs available at foreign universities and language schools, as well as through U.S.-sponsored programs.

Geographic Location

Geographic setting may be just as important as formal academic characteristics in determining whether a program is appropriate for you. As in the United States, large cities may offer excellent cultural opportunities but may also be expensive and impersonal. Small towns in farming regions may offer more contact with local residents and a traditional way of life, but some students may find the provincial lifestyle too limiting.

It should go without saying that no foreign study program can be a guaranteed perfect choice. Even when your needs are well matched to the program, you may suffer periods of loneliness and disorientation simply because you are in an unfamiliar environment. Remember that one of the most important lessons to be learned from time spent abroad is flexibility—and a willingness to go on enjoying and learning even when confronting unexpected circumstances.

The Third World

Study in the Third World can be especially meaningful and exciting for a variety of reasons. The fact that nearly three-quarters of the world's population live in these nations is bound to have a significant effect on the course of world history. From an economic standpoint, it is worth noting that U.S. trade with Third World countries now approaches 40 percent of all U.S. imports and exports. In today's economically interdependent world, knowledge of Third World nations may prove to be a tremendous career asset.

In addition, the cultures of the Third World countries pose a sharp contrast to that of the United States. They effectively challenge our customary assumptions about our own society and values, and provide a unique perspective on our larger world role.

One legacy of colonialism in the Third World is that the language of instruction is often English, Spanish, or French rather than the native tongue. This generalization does not apply, however, to countries like China, which has an extensive scientific and technical literature of its own, and which draws large numbers of students to study its literature, languages, and cultures.

Disabled Students

Many educational institutions provide facilities for the handicapped. However, the extent to which these students can be accommodated depends on the nature of their disabilities and the subject to be studied. Because disabled students may require special educational aids or services, they should discuss their needs with the program sponsors and investigate the possibility of obtaining supplementary funds to cover the costs of services required.

Information for the handicapped traveler is available from the U.S. branch of Mobility International (MIUSA), which publishes a newsletter and several booklets. For information on cost and ordering, write to MIUSA, P.O. Box 3551, Eugene, Oregon 97403.

Adult Learners

While most study-abroad programs are organized with the needs of the student-age population in mind, a significant number admit adult learners who have a professional or personal interest in study overseas. This is particularly true of programs held during vacation periods, which are described in IIE's Vacation Study Abroad. Where the information was provided by program sponsors, the listings in Academic Year Abroad and Vacation Study Abroad indicate whether a specific program admits professionals and/or adult students. However, adult learners should always contact the program sponsor directly to see if they are eligible to enroll. Direct contact will save time and misunderstanding in selecting an appropriate program.

Students over the age of 60 may be particularly interested in the international programs of Elderhostel, which combine the best traditions of education and hosteling for those of retirement age. For information and a catalog, write to Elderhostel, 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02216.

EDUCATIONAL CHOICES

Before enrolling in a foreign study program, you must determine its effect on your degree and graduation requirements. Your academic adviser and campus study-abroad adviser can help evaluate study abroad in relation to your academic needs and may assist in arranging academic credit.

U.S. college-sponsored programs generally award academic credit. Never assume, however, that credit will be granted automatically, or that you can wait until you complete the program to establish credit. Each school makes its own rules regarding transferable credits, and, if the program you select is not sponsored by your home institution, academic credit may not be accepted by it.

Once a proposed study program is approved by your adviser—and prior to departing from the United States—follow your school's specific procedure to ensure receipt of credit. It is strongly recommended that you secure a written document confirming that credit will be awarded. At some colleges or universities this may be done through the study-abroad office. At others, it will be handled by the admissions office or registrar. If there is no study-abroad adviser, your academic adviser can provide information.

Many U.S. colleges and universities allow students planning to study abroad to preregister for courses to be taken upon their return. This option should also be discussed with your study-abroad adviser prior to departure.

U.S. college-sponsored programs are often open to persons not seeking academic credit who enroll as nonmatriculated or special students. Noncredit study programs may also be offered by organizations not affiliated with a college or university.

Types of Study-Abroad Programs

While undergraduates may enroll directly in degree-granting programs at foreign universities, they more often enroll in programs sponsored by their own or other U.S. colleges. One advantage of U.S. college-sponsored programs is that they allow students to study in a foreign environment while remaining within a U.S. academic framework. Even where much of the actual course work is taken at a foreign university, academic credit is arranged through the U.S. sponsoring institution. In addition, special courses in the language and culture of the foreign country may be provided, and language requirements may be relaxed. Finally, the sponsoring college usually either provides or helps arrange nonacademic essentials, such as housing and round-trip transportation.

Most programs fall into one of these categories:

1. Study in a foreign institution combined with courses arranged for the group by the sponsoring institution—the most common form of study-abroad program. Courses taken at the foreign institution may consist of regular university courses, special courses for foreign students, courses in a specialized college (e.g., a teachers college or art school), or courses in a private institution offering special programs for foreign students. The courses arranged especially for the U.S. students may be taught either by faculty from the home campus or by foreign and U.S. faculty engaged by the program sponsors.

   One benefit of this type of program is that it lets you study at a foreign institution while meeting requirements for your U.S. degree. It also offers readily available help with any difficulties you may encounter in the foreign courses.

   Participants in these programs are usually required to have some knowledge of the language of the country. Nonetheless, special university courses for U.S. or other foreign students generally have less exacting language requirements than regular university courses. And some programs offer a choice of foreign institutions, depending on the level of language skills.

2. The program which is fully integrated into a foreign university or other college-level institution. In these, students enroll in a complete academic program in the foreign institution. (Some programs provide supplemental tutorials conducted by U.S. faculty members.) Absolute fluency in the language of instruction is expected. Students must be able to follow lectures and take examinations along with natives of the country. These programs can be very exciting and challenging for students who qualify.

   Since students enrolled in these programs will not have the opportunity to take any U.S. courses overseas, they must be sure to schedule required coursework at their home campuses.
3. The "island" program in which all courses are taught by faculty members of the sponsoring U.S. institution or by foreign faculty engaged specifically for the program. Students generally live together in housing leased by the sponsor.

   Some of these programs offer intensive language study for language majors. More often, however, these programs are conducted largely in English. In many areas of the world, they offer the only opportunity for meaningful study for students without a good command of a foreign language.

   An advantage of this type of program is that the sponsoring U.S. institution has as much control over the nature and quality of instruction as it has at home. The chief disadvantage is that U.S. students are isolated from the foreign academic milieu and may find themselves isolated socially as well.

   Immediately following World War II, when the number of U.S. college-sponsored programs abroad began to grow rapidly, many programs were of this type. Their relative numbers have declined in recent years, however, as more schools have worked to develop programs which offer at least some courses in a foreign institution.

Nearly all the programs listed in this book fall into one of these categories. A few programs offer only independent study opportunities. In some of these, qualified students—with prior approval of their advisers or department chairmen—carry out research projects abroad and receive credit from their home institutions. In others, U.S. students enroll in foreign universities and receive credit from their own schools for coursework abroad. Independent study arrangements like these are made on an individual basis by the students and their schools.

Sponsorship by Consortia

Many of the programs listed in IIE's Learning Traveler books are sponsored cooperatively by groups of U.S. colleges or consortia. Some are administered through central consortium offices, others by the participating schools who rotate administrative duties among themselves.

For students, it is unlikely to make any real difference whether a program is offered by one school or by a consortium. The chief advantage of cosponsored programs is that they sometimes feature specialized programs which individual schools find difficult to offer.

For schools, of course, the advantage of consortia sponsorship is the reduction of faculty and administrative work and costs. Consortia with large numbers of participating schools are listed in Appendix A of this book. Cosponsoring institutions of programs with five or fewer sponsors are listed in the individual entries. There is an index of all sponsoring institutions at the end of this book.

Direct Enrollment

Although this book is chiefly aimed at students seeking to enroll in study-abroad programs organized by U.S. institutions, it should be noted that it is also possible to enroll directly in many foreign universities. Direct enrollment is an option more often chosen by graduate students than by undergraduates, both because graduate students are more likely to be able to profit from specialized study programs abroad, and because many foreign universities require that new U.S. students already possess a bachelor's degree.

To enroll directly in a foreign university, look into the laws affecting higher education in the country where you plan to study. Some countries have quotas for the number of international students at their universities. These quotas often include restrictions on the numbers of foreign students admitted to particular fields, such as medicine, dentistry, the sciences, and law. Because such restrictions may change from year to year, investigate current regulations early in the planning process.

Since admission policies vary from country to country and institution to institution, it is advisable to write directly to institutions you are interested in for specific information on their policies, requirements, costs, housing arrangements, and other facilities. To ensure a response, enclose an International Reply coupon (available from any Post Office) with your inquiry.

Remember that, since educational systems vary, no foreign degree is exactly equivalent to a U.S. degree. If you are interested in graduate studies abroad, be sure to conduct extensive research on the educational systems of the countries which interest you. Study-abroad advisers can be invaluable in helping you to acquire the information you need to make a decision.

One source that should not be overlooked is the World Education Series, published by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO). Although designed for college admissions officers who need to evaluate foreign academic credentials, these publications provide an overview of each country's educational system. Write AACRAO, One DuPont Circle, Washington, DC 20038, for a complete list of titles.

Vacation Study Programs

Summer study abroad offers an excellent opportunity to combine vacation travel with study. U.S. and foreign colleges, universities, and other organizations sponsor a variety of summer programs (over 850 are listed in IIE's Vacation Study Abroad).

Many excellent short-term programs, usually lasting two or three weeks, are also offered by U.S. colleges and universities during interim sessions, usually in January. In addition, there are many specialized foreign institutes which offer short-term programs focusing on the art, language, and culture of the country in which they are located. These programs, which may range in length from three weeks to three months, are often open to persons of any age.

Internships

Many foreign study programs feature internships, which are designed to provide hands-on experience in a particular field of interest and may involve placements at museums, schools, government offices, etc. Most are developed in close consultation with faculty advisers and are tailored to suit the special needs of the student. An internship's success depends almost entirely on the initiative and creativity of the student.

Because of the growing popularity of internship programs and the special arrangements they involve, you must apply for a position and begin making arrangements well in advance. As with other types of programs, do not forget to clarify the issues of costs, academic credit, salary (if any), and housing options. Use the Field of Study Index in this book to locate internship programs and other voluntary service projects.

Voluntary Service Projects

International service projects, also known as workcamps, offer opportunities to young people from all over the world to live and work together with local people in community development. Usually no special skills are required. Most projects take place during the summer for two or three weeks. There is no pay, but volunteers generally receive room and board.

FINANCES

Establish a budget to help you determine which programs best meet your needs and financial capacity. Be especially careful to find out what program package fees do not cover. Program costs are submitted to IIE for this book some 12 to 18 months prior to the actual dates of the programs, so they should always be viewed as approximate. It is your responsibility to confirm program costs by contacting the sponsor directly. Fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates and inflation can markedly affect relative costs in U.S. dollars.

Package fees for programs sponsored by U.S. colleges and universities generally include transportation to and from the United States, tuition, fees, room and board, and program-related travel. Other major expenses to budget for are books, local transportation, health and accident insurance. Be especially careful to determine whether room and board and return trip transportation costs are included in the quoted fee. Additional expenses that must be allowed for are admission to cultural sites and events, gifts, optional travel (often an unexpectedly large item), bank charges for exchanging money, and miscellaneous personal expenses. Set aside some money for unexpected contingencies; they almost always occur.

Large amounts of cash should not be carried abroad. Traveler's checks can be obtained in either U.S. dollars or in major foreign currencies. International charge cards and bank credit cards can also be used in order to avoid the need to carry large amounts of cash. Be aware that hard currency restrictions in some countries limit the amount of foreign currency which can be changed back into U.S. dollars, particularly if the original exchange receipts have been misplaced. Do not under any circumstances exchange money on the black market.

Scholarships

At present most financial assistance available for study abroad is for graduate and postgraduate study. Undergraduates with regular university scholarships, however, are often allowed to use them for their own school's overseas programs. Your study-abroad adviser, financial aid officer, or bursar can advise you on the possibility of using federal and state aid for foreign study.

The Institute of International Education maintains a reference library which contains extensive scholarship and grant information through the IIE Information Center at 809 United Nations Plaza in New York City. Information, however, is only available upon a personal visit to the Center and not by mail or telephone.

Work Abroad

The practice of working one's way through college is not common overseas, although some study programs include nonpaid work experience such as internships and volunteer projects. Part-time work-study and trainee positions, which pay a small salary, are occasionally available, but cannot be relied upon to cover the bulk of your expenses overseas.

Summer work programs geared particularly towards students, trainees, and volunteers characteristically offer room and board rather than a salary. Archaeological excavations, for example, often fall into this category.

Foreign labor laws are often highly restrictive. Be sure to investigate them thoroughly if you plan to seek work abroad—and don't plan to rely on work in the private sector to pay your way.

TRAVEL AND LIVING

After selecting a study program, it is time to prepare for life in a foreign country. Your study-abroad experience will have greater personal value if you take an active role in learning about the language, history, and culture of the country, as well as current social and political conditions.

Attend any orientation sessions offered by the sponsors of your program. The history and culture of the country in which the program is located are usually reviewed in some detail.

Language exams and assigned readings may also form a part of orientation sessions. Be sure to review the program literature carefully and ask questions about issues which confuse you before they present real problems.

Books, periodicals, plays, films, and museum exhibits can provide additional information, as will the embassy, consulate, or tourist office of the country in which you plan to study.

People encountered abroad are frequently curious about the United States. As a consequence, you can expect to be hit with a barrage of questions about U.S. government policies, as well as questions having to do with history, economics, culture, and current events. To be forewarned is to be forearmed!

Laws and Customs

Orientation sessions usually review the more important laws and customs students must comply with. These are not empty warnings. One of the biggest mistakes you can make is to assume that behavior and actions acceptable in the United States are appropriate everywhere.

For example, in many countries local cultural values dictate that certain parts of the body be covered, particularly in sacred places. Flouting such customs is perceived as a deliberate affront. In such situations, verbal protestations can escalate into threats or physical assaults. This is particularly true if the U.S. student is thought to be indifferent to the initial objections. It is important to realize that civil rights issues are simply not involved. U.S. notions regarding freedom of speech and expression have no parallel in many countries. Even where the potential for violence is not an issue, students should realize that what may be perceived as bizarre behavior will tend to alienate them from the local populace.

It is even more important to adhere closely to the laws of the country in which you are living or traveling. It is unwise to rationalize that you are only committing a minor infraction when exchanging money on the black market, or making purchases for foreign friends in hard currency shops which are legally out of bounds for native peoples. Breaking the law—even a repressive, irrational, or antiquated one—is still breaking the law and can lead to the severest of penalties. At the very least, you can expect to be expelled from the program and possibly deported from the country. U.S. college-sponsored programs are there at the sufferance of their hosts, and sponsors will not risk their program to protect students found breaking the law. Do not expect special intervention from U.S. consulates either.

It should be noted that narcotic laws are strictly enforced overseas, particularly in the case of U.S. or other foreign students. Harsh sentences, ranging up to life imprisonment, are not unknown, even in countries where natives appear to break such laws with impunity. Remember that U.S. students abroad are in fact seen as "ambassadors" for their country.

Warnings aside, there are few pleasures to compare with the experience of forming friendships with people who have spent their entire lives in a different milieu and who can communicate whole new perspectives on the most ordinary of life's experiences. Be sensitive rather than brash, and discover what life is like for others on this planet.

Accommodations

Student housing is difficult to find almost everywhere. Dormitory space is often so limited that many foreign universities have strict quotas for the number of rooms allotted to international students. Generally, U.S. students live in apartments, pensions, student hostels, or with families. Be sure to find out whose responsibility it is to make housing arrangements. Check with the program sponsors to see what arrangements they have made and investigate the available alternatives. It is essential that housing arrangements be confirmed well in advance of the departure date.

Passports, Visas, and Vaccinations

Valid passports are required for travel abroad. You may apply in person to a passport agent at U.S. Department of State agencies in Boston, Chicago, Honolulu, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, New York City, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle, Stamford (Connecticut), or Washington, DC. Passports are also issued through selected post offices, or by clerks of any federal court or state court of records. Proof of U.S. citizenship (birth certificate, naturalization certificate, or previous U.S. passport), two recent photographs (2" x 2"), and current identification with a personal signature and photograph or physical description (such as a driver's license) are required.

For citizens 18 years or older, a passport valid for ten years costs $35 plus a required $7 execution fee. A five-year passport for citizens under age 18 is $20 plus a required $7 execution fee. You must appear in person if you are applying for the first time, are renewing a passport issued over eight years ago, or were younger than 18 when your last passport was issued. Apply early: processing an application takes four to six weeks—longer during the peak travel season.

A visa is written permission to visit a country granted by the government of that country. Visa requirements vary from country to country and are fully described in Visa Requirements of Foreign Governments (Publication M-264) available at any passport agency or by writing to Office of Passport Services, Room 386, 1425 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20524.

Anyone planning to study in a country for an extended period of time may need to get a special student visa. Information relating to all visas may be obtained from the nearest embassy or consulate of the country concerned. Many visa applications require that you submit passport-type photographs to be kept on file or incorporated into the visa itself. It is always wise to obtain extra prints of your passport photographs for such purposes.

Vaccination certificates for inoculation against yellow fever, cholera, or malaria are required by some countries. Check current regulations with your local public health department.

Medical Insurance and Other Health Concerns

The importance of having adequate insurance when visiting another country cannot be overestimated. Before leaving the United States, check your medical and accident insurance policies to be sure they are valid while traveling overseas. If coverage does not extend to travel abroad, you may want to obtain supplemental medical and accident policies. Holders of the International Student Identity Card receive basic medical/accident insurance coverage for their travel outside the continental United States.

While it is easy to stay healthy abroad, in certain countries this requires taking some elementary precautions. Do not hesitate to ask about these during orientation sessions, and take the advice seriously. Some countries, particularly those in tropical regions, have bacterial, fungal, and parasitical diseases which are extemely difficult to cure once they have become established. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, so be sensible when in areas which are known to present a specific disease risk.

If you depend on certain prescription drugs, even intermittently, be aware that foreign drugs are not necessarily closely related to those standard in the United States. Similar drugs may be marketed under different names and may not be available in the strengths you desire. If you know that you will need certain medicines, it is wise to bring an adequate supply. Label all bottles clearly and carry copies of the prescriptions to avoid problems with Customs. In the case of narcotic medicines, it may not be prudent to carry additional supplies because of possible Customs difficulties. Reasonable amounts of nonprescription drugs, such as aspirin and stomach remedies, can come in handy when staying in some of the more remote regions of the world.

Finally, if you wear prescription eyeglasses or contact lenses, bring an extra pair and your prescription. This is particularly important if you wear contact lenses, as contact lens technology changes so rapidly that you may well find that the specific type of lens you are accustomed to is not available in the country to which you are going.

Transportation

Many U.S.-sponsored study abroad programs include group transportation. In other cases, students are responsible for their own transportation to and from the program site. Foreign government tourist offices, consulates, and embassies provide a wide variety of free literature about travel to and in their particular country.

Recent deregulation in the airline industry has resulted in a proliferation of discounted airfares. Shop carefully if you are looking for an inexpensive flight; the cheapest flight is not necessarily the one that best suits your needs. Fares that specify a return date should be looked at particularly carefully, as these may not allow the flexibility you need.

Aim to travel lightly, especially if you will be participating in a study tour program. Remember that you will have to carry whatever you bring, so restrict yourself to no more than two moderate-sized bags and a small carry-on shoulder bag in which to keep valuables, passport, and camera equipment. Baggage and personal effects should be insured for the full duration of the period abroad. If you bring a camera, purchase a lead-lined film bag. Contrary to airport claims, some X-ray devices are ruinous to film.

Once abroad, railroads are often an economical and convenient way to travel. In Europe and Great Britain, Eurail and Britrail passes offer unlimited train travel for periods of one week to three months. These passes offer considerable savings to those who travel extensively during the covered periods. Although Eurail passes are not valid in Britain, they can be used on certain ferries, including those between Italy and Greece, France and Ireland, and in Scandinavia.

If you think you might want to rent a car at some point, remember that in the British Isles and in many Commonwealth countries and Japan, cars drive on the left-hand side of the road. Your U.S. driver's license is generally accepted abroad, but it may be necessary to supplement it with an International Driver's License, which provides a multilingual translation of the information on your U.S. driver's license.

An excellent source of information about student travel is the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE). CIEE publishes the Student Travel Catalog (annual, $1.00 postage and handling), and offers the International Student Identity Card as well as a wide variety of student travel services. The International Student ID Card entitles student bearers to numerous discounts on transportation, accommodations, museum entrance fees, and more. Contact CIEE headquarters at 205 East 42d Street, New York, NY 10017, or Council Travel offices in San Francisco, Berkeley, San Diego, Pacific Beach, Long Beach, Austin, Seattle, Boston, Amherst, Providence, and Portland.

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAMS

IIE Programs

IIE administers U.S. student applications for the following vacation study abroad programs:

- British Universities Summer Schools—a joint program conducted by the universities of Birmingham (at Stratford-upon-Avon), London, and Oxford in literature, drama, and history.
- British Archaeology—a summer program of the Association for Cultural Exchange in Cambridge involving both classroom work and participation in archaeological digs.
- Vienna and Salzburg Summer Schools—six-week programs in German language and Austrian culture.

For more information on these programs, write to the U.S. Student Programs Division, IIE.

The Institute of International Education also administers the academic competition for the predoctoral Fulbright Program sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, the ITT International Fellowship program, and a limited number of foreign government grants. IIE is responsible for issuing and receiving applications and for providing appropriate information on these financial aid programs.

However, aside from these awards, the Institute does not offer any scholarships, awards, or loans for study abroad. A description of the financial assistance programs administered by IIE for U.S. citizens to study abroad is available in the IIE publication Fulbright and Other Grants for Graduate Study Abroad published each May and available free of charge. Students planning to apply for graduate awards available through IIE should plan ahead. The application deadline date is typically October 31 of the year preceding the academic year of the grant (e.g., October 31, 1986, for 1987-88 academic year awards), although there are some variations for specific types of awards. For more information, consult your campus study-abroad or Fulbright adviser.
